Neil Wallace and the Port Macquarie based SKM Motorsport Dirt Late Model Team are looking to raise the benchmark in season 2010/11 after showing good form in the later stages of last season.

“The 2009/10 season saw numerous niggling car issues early on that hindered our attempt to establish ourselves as one of the leading Dirt Late Model Teams in the nation. It was only the final two race meetings where we realised our true potential, running strong in the rained out NSW title at Tamworth, followed a week later by our Queensland Championship victory in Maryborough” Neil Wallace said.

“I must admit it was very satisfying to clinch the Queensland title, but we need to continue that form across the entire season. There are plenty of top racers operating on the East Coast these days and unless you are on your game, and run at the front regularly, you are going to struggle overall, and particularly in the big meetings”.

"With our first hit out of the season at Tyrepower Sydney Speedway this Saturday night (October 16) it's imperative that we come away with a good result" Wallace said.

"Over the winter we have undertaken a complete rebuild of our Rocket and I'm confident that the crew have done their job, so it's just up to me to do the same out on the track. It's also great to have all of our team sponsors once again on board for this season."

"We plan to be in a strong position for the major Late Model races starting with the NSW Title at Leeton in December, the Gold Cup at Parramatta in mid January, and the Australian Title at Mildura a week later".

"As the reigning Queensland champion we will defend that title also, but right now all our efforts are focussed on a great start in the East Coast Late Model Series at Parramatta Saturday night" concluded Wallace.

SKM Motorsport also has a new website address for this season, with all the team news located on the SKM Motorsport page at www.vikingglobal.net
